

Ludwig sal jou verslae laat

Ludwig begin op BBC Brit op DStv op 18 Maart.

Resensie: Danie Jacobs

Ludwig, die nuwe TV-reeks met David Mitchell in die hoofrol, sal jou verslae na jou TV laat staar. Nie net omdat dit briljant is nie, maar ook omdat dit heeltemal vergesog is.

Die meeste polisieëreke wat ek al gekyk het, vertel stories wat grens aan bisar, maar in 'n mate kan jy glo die mense weet wat hulle doen. Speurders is tog opgelei en kundiges in hul veld.

broer, ons praat dieselfde, trek dieselfde aan, het dieselfde manierismes en as julle langs mekaar staan weet mense nie wie is wie nie. Tog werk die reeks en is dit beskryf as die beste nuwe drama-reeks in Brittanje.

Mitchell speel 'n introvert wat legkaarte uitdink en wie se broer verdwyn het. Sy skoonsuster praat hom om dat hy hom as sy broer voordoen en sodoende toegang tot sy broer se rekenaar by sy werk kry. Dit klink na kinderspeletjies. Sy broer is egter die speurhoof in Cambridge!

In die eerste episode het ek verstom gekyk hoe Mitchell bloot inloop by die polisiestasie, niemand ken nie en tog almal hom aansien as sy broer. Dan moet hy 'n saak oplos, wat hy wonder bo wonder doen deur net sy kennis van legkaarte te gebruik en sy kollegas staan verstom oor sy nuwe kennis. Sjoer, as dit maar so maklik was.

Kyk Ludwig en besluit self of jy die speurhoof se plek kan volstaan en niemand kom dit agter nie. As jy verby dit kan kyk, sal jy 'n puik draaiboek, humor en vertoning deur een van die beste akteurs sien. Jy mag dit nie mis nie.

Dan kyk jy Ludwig en jy weet dit kan tog nie moontlik wees nie? Of kan dit? Mitchell se persoonlikheid en puik toneelspel trek jou egter in en dan vra jy jousef of jy ook net by 'n speurtak kan instap en jou broer se werk oorneem en niemand kom agter jy is nie hy nie. Ek skud net my kop, want ek sal binne 2 minute uitgevang word - al is dit my identiese tweeling-

LET'S COOK

Spicy tomato, steak & avo HUMMUS TOAST

Serves: 4-6

Preparation time: 15 minutes

Cooking time: 20 minutes

Ingredients:

FOR THE AVO HUMMUS

- ~ 1 avocado
- ~ 400 g tin chickpeas, drained
- ~ 15 ml (1 tbsp) tahini (optional)
- ~ 1 garlic clove, crushed
- ~ 30 ml avocado or olive oil + extra
- ~ Juice of 1 lemon, to taste
- ~ Salt and pepper

FOR THE SPICY TOMATO STEAK

- ~ 300 g beef sirloin steak
- ~ 250 g packet cherry tomatoes
- ~ 30 ml (2 tbsp) red wine vinegar
- ~ 15 ml (1 tbsp) chilli flakes

TO SERVE

- ~ 4-6 slices sourdough, toasted
- ~ 1 avocado, sliced
- ~ Handful basil

Method:

- ~ For the avo hummus, blitz together all the ingredients until smooth.
- ~ Season with salt and pepper.
- ~ For the spicy tomato steak, heat a large frying pan over high heat until smoking hot.
- ~ Add a splash of extra oil and fry the steak for about 3 minutes on each side for medium rare, or until cooked to your liking.
- ~ Season with salt and pepper.
- ~ Set aside for 5 minutes before thinly slicing.
- ~ Meanwhile, add the tomatoes to the hot pan with a splash of extra oil, vinegar and chilli flakes.
- ~ Reduce the heat to low, cover with a lid and simmer for about 5 minutes or until the tomatoes start to burst.
- ~ Season with salt and pepper.
- ~ Take off the heat and mix through the steak strips (don't leave in the pan for too long, you don't want to cook the steak further).
- ~ To serve, spread the toasts with avo hummus, top with the tomato steak mixture, avo slices and basil.

LEGAL CORNER

Injured by a hazardous product: know your rights

In a recent judgment, the courts were required to consider whether a consumer who suffered personal injuries from a hazardous product, was entitled to approach a court directly or first exhaust the remedies provided for in the Consumer Protection Act.

Law firm Meyer, Van Sittert and Kropman review the court's findings regarding a consumer's rights regarding a hazardous product.

The Consumer Protection Act provides for the strict liability of producers, importers, distributors or retailers of a particular product for any harm caused where the product is unsafe, had a product failure, is defective or hazardous or where the consumer was provided with inadequate instructions or warnings concerning any hazard arising from or associated with the use of the product.

Strict liability means these producers, importers, distributors or retailers can be held jointly and severally liable for any harm caused by a particular product. A consumer can therefore institute a claim against one of them (or all) for the damages that result from harm caused by the product without the consumer having to prove wrongfulness and negligence in producing, importing, distributing or selling the particular product.

The CPA provides several ways for consumers to enforce their rights. If a dispute arises, consumers can:

- Refer the matter to the Consumer Tribunal.
- Approach a relevant ombud with jurisdiction, such as the Consumer Goods and Services Ombud, or an industry-specific ombud like MIOSA.
- Apply to the Consumer Court.
- Refer the matter to another alternative dispute resolution agent, as outlined in the CPA.
- File a complaint with the National Consumer Commission.

These options ensure that consumers have multiple avenues to address violations of their rights effectively.

The CPA also provides that a consumer is entitled to approach a court of law with jurisdiction, only if all other remedies available to such consumer in terms of national legislation have been exhausted.

This raises the question: can a consumer approach a court of law directly to institute a claim against a producer, importer, distributor or retailer for personal injuries caused by their product, or must the consumer first exhaust the plethora of other available enforcement remedies as provided for in the CPA?

In Pieterse and Others v Organic Synthesis (Pty) Ltd a family wanted to heat their food in little three-legged pots, by using an ethanol gel product they purchased. The gel was contained in tin cups designed to be placed underneath the pots. The flame in one of the pots went out, and while it was being re-filled, an explosion occurred. This caused burning ethanol gel to splash onto some family members, resulting in serious burns.

The plaintiffs who suffered burns instituted a claim against the wholesale distributor of the ethanol gel product, based on the strict liability of the wholesale distributor in terms of the CPA for the harm caused by the product.

The defendant raised a defence against the claim of the plaintiffs claiming that the court did not have jurisdiction to hear and adjudicate the plaintiffs' claim as the plaintiffs failed to allege and prove that they exhausted all the available enforcement remedies as provided for in the CPA to resolve the dispute before approaching the court.

The court reviewed all the remedies available to the plaintiffs in terms of the CPA in respect of the enforcement of their rights and found that no sufficient remedy was provided for by the CPA in terms of which a consumer could enforce its rights against a producer, importer, distributor or retailer of a particular product having suffered harm by the product. Accordingly, because no such sufficient remedy is available, only a court of law can adjudicate the plaintiffs' claim for the damages against the wholesale distributor resulting from the personal injuries caused by the particular product.

The Pieterse judgment confirms that a consumer may approach a court of law directly without first having exhausted the other remedies provided for in the CPA in respect of a claim for damages as a result of an unsafe or hazardous product.
